Bush: Sending aid to Iran does not mean US seeks warmer ties

WASHINGTON President George W. Bush said Sunday that the United States is not seeking warmer relations with Iran, despite the aid package he announced last week.

"We are not seeking warmer relations with Iran," Bush said in a statement. "We are simply providing humanitarian aid to the people of Iran."

The aid package includes $1 billion in humanitarian aid, including food, medicine, and other supplies. It also includes $500 million in economic aid.

Bush said the aid package is a "demonstration of our commitment to the people of Iran." He said the aid package is "a step in the right direction."

Death toll in deadly Lucena fire rises to 20

GENERO CITY—The death toll in Saturday's massive fire in a shopping mall in Lucena, Quezon, has risen to 20, with 10 more people injured, officials said.

The fire broke out in the Lucena Mall, a two-story building that houses a variety of shops and restaurants. The fire started in the ground floor and spread rapidly to the upper floor.

Firefighters arrived at the scene within minutes and worked to contain the fire. However, the fire was too large and spread too quickly for them to control.

The fire caused significant damage to the mall and the surrounding area. The fire also caused the evacuation of many people who were shopping or dining at the mall.

Background

"Selling a 'dream' like I've done in the past is not the same as selling a 'dream' like I am doing now," says the author. "I am now selling a dream that is real, a dream that is achievable, a dream that is within reach. I am now selling a dream that is not just a dream, but a reality."

† [1] How to Fly to Hell, published under the pseudonym of an anti-religious and anti-scientific atheist, says: "I have found that the only way to fly to Hell is to fly to Hell." This is a very good example of the kind of "logic" that is used to support the claim that Hell is a real place. 1. Ames [1962] (p. 149) (p. 150). He discusses why it is possible for some animals with the same brains to be in a knowledge state in a strong content, if their perceptual ability is more acute and accurate than others. See pp. 151. He says: "The difference in perceptual ability between the two animals is almost negligible, but it is enough to make the difference in what they know." Home along the 'rules' —as it is in real life

By Naqiani Torre

(Conclusion)

UNLIKE most documentaries, Dini Carolino's "Rules" is unrated. This makes for a loosely structured film unified by the strength of character of the central family's members, and the forceful impact of their milieu, which the filmmaker frames as honestly as possible.

Family

The family is composed of Eddie, Pen, and their five children—three of whom the couple adopted after their real mother was hit by a train. Eddie is a batar vendor and Pen iron and folds clothes. She is suffering from breast cancer.

What struck us from the very beginning of the documentary were the couple's centeredness and the sense of humor which they retained despite all the hardships in their life. "Home Along Da Rules" this is not, but we nevertheless found ourselves laughing at times—with the subjects, but not at them, which is the kind of laughter that slapstick can never inspire.

This is no romanticization of the poor; it is just that the filmmaker was fortunate enough to find a couple like Pen and Eddie who have not resorted to crime and drugs to ease their poverty. Even at their roughest—and they can get pretty rough—and at their most desperate, they maintain their dignity.

EVEN at their most desperate, Eddie and Pen maintain their dignity.

Attitude

It is an attitude that impresses us and shames us at the same time, we who are better off materially but who have not achieved their level of grace.

Pen and Eddie are not perfect—he drinks, and she nags too much. We see them at their worst and at their best, sometimes even at the same time, and this only serves to awaken our sympathy.

It reminds us that what we see on the screen is fact, not fiction, and that even if the filmmaker has already framed it, it nevertheless exists beyond that frame.

The absence of narration also means that we hear the voices of Pen, Eddie, and their children even more clearly. This is their story, not the filmmaker's, and it illustrates how mature Dini has become in her filmmaking.

"Rules" runs for only 70 minutes, but like all great films, documentaries and otherwise, this production will remain in your mind and heart for the longest time.

Healthy holidays

PEOPLE expect the Christmas season to be filled with happiness and joy. But some things ruin the Christmas spirit. We have listed holiday "busters" to avoid:

Pollutants

1. Air pollutants burden our respiratory system. Let's find healthier ways to celebrate the New Year than lighting mini-bombs that shatter the eardrums.

2. Deadly food comes from meat with high uric acid, sugar-filled desserts and fatty dishes. Celebration does not mean turning our backs on the principles of a healthy lifestyle. We have to avoid substances that damage the natural function of our organs.

3. Artificial drinks aren't good for our body. Fruit juices nourish, while artificially colored and flavored drinks only add chemical burdens to our system. Water is always better than any artificial drink.

4. Intoxicants can ruin the spirit of the holidays. Studies have shown how an alcoholic drink can destroy body organs and tissues.

Social drink

How can we afford to lose those precious brain cells? How can we sacrifice our liver cells for a social drink?

5. Nasty talk and gossip pollute the heart and mind. It is a season to be kind and generous, and a time to control our overly active imagination. Keep the tongue away from overeating, as well as from talking about other people's lives!

Seiko's 'Bridal Shower...

More than anything, though, it's Jeturian's fresh, tight direction that makes the movie work. He uses flashbacks and graphics to show that the movie doesn't take itself too seriously.

Departure

His film is a refreshing departure from distressingly maladsor romantic comedies that churn out similar themes all year long. It mostly sidesteps the obvious sociopolitical commentaries used by some local directors, but when it does become relevant, the scenes don't appear forced and self-indulgent.

The movie has flaws: Why the need for a two-years-later epilogue just to give it the proverbial happy ending? If Sonia is in it for the money, why sign the pre-nup at all?

Charm and wit

Some "over-zealous" performances should have been toned down. Plus, a comedy should never be this long. But the film has more charm and wit going for it than most comedies.

We left the theater still chuckling over some scenes. If Robbie Tan's Seiko can't do away with naughty themes altogether, then it should at least make good naughty films—like "Bridal Shower."
